Keilim is not a legal document, and your organization needs to take into account all relevant federal, state, and local laws. Because laws vary by state and city, it is essential that you also work with an attorney to ensure that your protocols are legally compliant.*

Resources

The following is a list of organizations that provide information, support, and reporting resources for those with personal experiences related to abuse, harassment, and other abuses of power. Including such a list with your reporting form can help members of your community know where to turn for additional support and signals that your organization is aware of and compassionate toward the trauma that individuals may be experiencing. Consider adapting this list to include organizations in your own community (e.g. local Jewish Family Services) that provide related support and resources.

Workplace Discrimination & Harassment

- U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission: The EEOC is responsible for enforcing federal laws that make it illegal to discriminate against a job applicant or employee because of the person's race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy, transgender status, and sexual orientation), national origin, age (40 or older), disability, or genetic information. Most employers with at least 15 employees are covered by EEOC laws (20 employees in age discrimination cases). Most labor unions and employment agencies are also covered. The laws apply to all types of work situations, including hiring, firing, promotions, harassment, training, wages, and benefits. You can look up your nearest EEOC field office here.
- Workplaces Respond to Domestic & Sexual Violence: A National Resource Center. This resource center offers training, tools, and resources to survivors, employers, co-workers and advocates for responding to sexual violence and harassment. You can review their recent publication, "Six Supportive Ways to Address Trauma that Shows Up at Work," here.
- Many states and cities have local enforcement agencies. You can search for your state or city's name along with any of the following terms: "harassment enforcement," "discrimination enforcement," or "civil rights."

Sexual Violence
